

Sentiero Di Shay & Pine Bog Ski Trails

The Sentiero Di Shay and Pine Bog Ski Loops are located about 21.5 miles north of Waterville along PA-44. The Di Shay Trail is a 13.2-mile trail that intersects PA-44 as well as many forestry roads. It also connects to the Francis Kennedy, George Will, and Pine Bog trails. The trail gets its name from the Shay locomotives that were utilized to haul the timber that was felled from the Black Forest to local sawmills in the late 1800s.

The Pine Bog Loop (blazed blue) is a short 1.9-mile loop that traverses dense conifers along old railroad grades. Due to its short length, it's best to ski it in both directions, and it's a beautiful trail to ski immediately after a snowfall due to the dense conifers along the trail corridor.

Both trails share the same trailhead along PA-44, just south of the Village of Black Forest on the right side of PA-44, across from the Blackberry Trail. These trails are designated ski trails and generally too wet for equestrian use. Skiing on both trails is best when temperatures are well below freezing due to the amount of water

The Tiadaghton State Forest's cross-country ski trails were the first to be built anywhere on State Forest Land in Pennsylvania and were largely the efforts of past DCNR employees Bob Webber and John Eastlake, who can also be credited with laying out the scenic Black Forest Trail. Webber and Eastlake were "way ahead of their time" regarding the promotion of cross-country skiing in the Commonwealth.

Ski trails are marked with blue paint. The parking area/trailhead shown on the map is plowed for winter recreation enthusiasts. Ski trail conditions are available by calling the district office or by checking out Tiadaghton State Forest on Facebook.

The district offers many miles of trails cross country ski trails, not including the 60-plus miles of the Pine Creek Rail Trail, which is also open to skiers.
